Is it time for a new battery?
It could depend on where you live ...

According to Battery Council International, average battery life varies significantly by region. For example, here's how weather conditions adversely affect battery life and/or performance:

HEAT accelerates internal battery corrosion and deterioration, and in extreme conditions can itself cause vehicle starting difficulties, just like the cold. Heat is the #1 cause of premature battery failure.

COLD retards the chemical reaction that creates the cranking power in a battery and exposes the damage and deterioration caused by heat. Cold also increases the vehicle starting demands. Two and a half times the current is required to start a vehicle at zero degrees than at 80 degrees.

If your battery is more than three years old -- particularly if you live in the North -- you should have us test it before it fails. We'll install a new Mazda battery backed by a nationwide warranty with 12 months free replacement and a 60-month prorated period.
